Become a Project Community Volunteer

What is Project Community?

Positive East's Project Community aims to improve the sexual and reproductive health, knowledge of HIV/STIs and prevention of minoritised communities in City & Hackney.

This includes people of Black African and Caribbean descent and LGBTQ+ people.

Do you want to make a difference?

Project Community volunteers are at the heart of what we do and play a crucial role in helping to address the sexual and reproductive health inequalities experienced by City & Hackney residents.

Our volunteers work directly with the community, providing education, insight, support and awareness.

“Becoming a Project Community volunteer has allowed me to learn more about sexual and reproductive health and support my community”

Do you want to build new skills?

Becoming a Project Community volunteer is a great way to develop transferable skills and learn in-depth knowledge around sexual and reproductive health. You'll also gain insight into the charity sector.

How to become a Project Community Volunteer

Positive East will provide you with full training and all the support you'll need to become an advocate for good sexual health.

“I’ve enjoyed being a Project
Community volunteer, it’s a great way to make City &
Hackney a better place”

“I now feel more confident to talk openly about HIV and sexual health, helping to reduce inequalities in my community”
